VAMPIRES AT U.S. MARINES

Fanged fiends bite 5 soldiers during 16-hour bloodbath!

A HIGH-LEVEL hush-hush Army report reveals that shocked U.S. Marines stumbled upon a nest of vicious vampires in a dark Afghan cave and engaged in a 16-hour firefight before destroying the bloodthirsty fiends.

By JUSTIN MITCHELL

According to classified U.S. Defense Department documents leaked to Weekly World News, five of the Marines were bitten by the ferocious creatures and are now being held in a top secret underground military facility in West Virginia. They're being kept under observation to make sure they don't turn into blood-sucking fiends, too.

"It's touch and go," said a top-level military intelligence source, speaking under the condition of anonymity. "These troops sustained vicious fang wounds and based on what we know of vampire lore, they aren't out of the woods yet.

"These have already exhibited discomfort with natural lighting and two others became violently ill after ingesting a meal that included garlic bread.

"Visits from a Catholic priest have also resulted in some awkward incidents in which all five seemed to be physically repulsed by his rosary beads."

According to the military report, the strange, highly charged encounter began on April 1 when the squad of "tunnel rats" was clearing out a complex of caves in the mountains 60 miles east of Gardez, the capital of Paktia province.

After four 1-ton "thermobaric" bombs, which send suffocating blasts through cave complexes, pounded the area, the Marines moved in to root out surviving supporters of Osama bin Laden.

According to the top secret document: "After nearly 30 minutes inside the complex, the personnel encountered no resistance and discovered the remains of 27 suspected Taliban supporters, along with debris such as political and religious tracts, pita bread, hummus, posters of Osama bin Laden, videotapes of Seventy-Two Virgins Handfeeding Honeyed Sesame Cakes to Martyrs in Paradise Vols. 1-17 and what appeared to be inflatable vinyl life-size goat and sheep 'dolls' believed to be used for 'recreational purposes'.

"But upon discovering and entering a hole 5 meters from the cavern's presumed headquarters, the personnel were unexpectedly engaged in resistance by an estimated 12 individuals described as 'Dracudas with turbans.'"

"It can only be described as bizarre," said the military source. "We've recovered the so-called vampire corpses and they are undergoing autopsies and forensic tests, but all of them range in canine 'fangs,' large pointed ears, hairy palms, red pupils, unnaturally swollen, scarlet lips and receding hairlines.

"Their tracheas and no shadows and none of their images are reflected in any mirrors or shiny objects – such as autopsy tools – that we possess."

quarreled but threw themselves snarling and growling and snapping at the soldiers.

"The bullets had no effect, except to momentarily stun and delay the attackers," said the source. "Our boys were outnumbered and had no idea what they were up against or how to overcome these demons."

After one turban-headed night creature lunged and bit a lance corporal on his exposed neck, a crucifix around the marine's neck was also exposed during the frenetic struggle and his bloodthirsty attacker immediately shrank back, cowering and howling in fright.

"The ghouls began whimpering and cowering — they were subdued enough to allow the other seven marines to goad them toward the cave entrance where the wall-to-wall carnage [illegible] long. SEX SHOCKER!

Hunk, 25 falls for granny, 72!

Live-in lovers Betty Dodson and Eric Wilkinson are crazy about each other — even though she's a grandmotherly 72 years old and he's a spring chicken of 25!

And, despite the nearly half-century age difference, the lovebirds can't stop raving about their fabulous sex life!

"We've spent entire days in bed together," camera-shy Eric, who's not pictured, told the online magazine Salon, which ran a profile on him and his long-in-the-tooth lover.

Delighted Betty added, "We're always hugging and tickling and stroking."

The offbeat May-December romance is reminiscent of the 1971 cult classic Harold and Maude in which the late Ruth Gordon played a free-spirited 79-year-old who ends up befriending and then bedding a twenty-something man.

"Oh sure, we got Harold-and-Maude teasing," Betty said. "So, I'm so much older. But so what? When men have girlfriends or marry much younger women, no one bats an eye."

The odd couple live together in the oldster's swank Manhattan apartment.

While Betty could easily be Eric's grandmother she's not just a little old lady — she's one of America's leading sex gurus. The spry senior holds a Ph.D. in sexology, produces sexy-ed videos and sex toys and is the author of a groundbreaking book on self-love, titled Sex for One. And she's done plenty of "hands-on" research over the decades — including group sex parties in the '60s.

"I must have had sex with 1,000 men and women," she guesstimates.

By contrast, Eric grew up in conservative Virginia, in a staid middle-class home.

In college, he wanted to study human sexuality but found himself frustrated.

"They didn't have any courses in what I wanted to learn," he said in the interview "I wanted better sexual skills. I wanted coaching."

Then he read Betty's book and was blown away by the nitty-gritty, how-to details.

In 1999, he began writing her and they corresponded via e-mail for months.

Finally Eric wrangled a visit — and came determined to bed the elderly expert. That Betty had been around the block — many, many a time — didn't faze him.

"Women lovers my own age were inhibited, not very creative," he explained. "What I wanted was a sexual mentor and Betty seemed like the perfect woman."

For the frisky senior citizen, too, it was lust at first sight.

desirable, a gorgeous 6-foot hunk," she recalled. "We went out to lunch, returned to my apartment and had four hours of very hot sex."

Erik admits he had some jitters about what it would be like hitting the sheets with a woman three times his age. But he found she was amazingly well-preserved.

"When we got naked that first time, I was very pleasantly surprised," he said. "Betty looked nothing like my vision of what a 69-year-old woman ought to look like. She's taken very good care of herself."

When he told his parents about the relationship, they were shell-shocked.

"At first, my mom was afraid Betty was taking advantage of me," he said. "My dad didn't say much beyond, 'Come on home. Drop this fantasy. Get a life.'"

Instead, David moved in and now handles the business end of Betty's smut.

"For a while, Betty's friends thought I was sponging off her," he said. "That stopped when they saw how much help it was and how happy we both were."

Betty, who describes herself as not only Eric's lover, but also "his mother, grandmother and auntie," couldn't care less what outsiders think about the age difference.

"Age is just a number," she proclaimed.

MUMMY FOUND IN

Authorities have discovered the mummified remains of a man who died 20 years ago — while waiting in a telephone booth for an important call!

By VICKIE YORK
Weekly World News

Officials in Sandakan, Malaysia, say John Ngiam's corpse was found propped up in the run-down, long-defunct phone booth on the outskirts of a small outlying town — still patiently waiting for a call that would never come.

The macabre discovery was made by phone company workers, who were belatedly executing an order to remove the out-of-service telephone booth.

Investigators say foul play has been ruled out. "The exact cause of death has not yet been determined, but our guess is that the victim succumbed to dehydration while standing for several days in the hot phone booth," said police spokesman Capt. Law Gook Chin.

Rice farmer Ngiam, a father of five, dropped off the face of the Earth at age 41 on Aug. 12, 1982 — and no one ever looked for him in the phone booth, tucked away behind a grocery store that had closed seven months earlier.

"From what investigators have been able to gather from examining phone logs, Mr. Ngiam placed a call to a sweepstakes company after receiving a letter telling him he might have won a large sum of money," said Capt. Chin.

"He was told to leave a phone number where he could be reached, and when he explained that he didn't have a phone of his own, the operator took the number of the booth and told him to sit tight, she'd call back and let him know if he'd won.

"He excitedly agreed to wait.

"Unfortunately, unbeknownst to him, about two hours later, the phone company shut off service to the underutilized phone.

"But Mr. Ngiam was a very determined man — he literally waited until he died."

Experts who've examined the body call it "a unique case" of natural mummification.

"The telephone booth formed an almost perfect seal against moisture, bacteria and the elements," explained Dr. Ng Ho Peng, chairman of the pathology department at Pulau Pinang Medical College. "The body simply dried out and froze stiffly in position after undergoing rigor mortis.

"This type of natural mummification is quite common in dry, arid desert regions, but is almost unheard of in Southeast Asia. You can be sure I'll be using slides of the unfortunate Mr. Ngiam in lectures for years to come."

Ironically, investigators say it turns out Ngiam really DID win the sweepstakes and was entitled to win the equivalent of nearly $7 million U.S. money — enough to handsomely support the impoverished rice farmer, his wife, five children and 11 sisters for the rest of their lives.

But since the company

Family members, who are badly shaken by news of the grisly discovery, say they last saw Ngiam on the afternoon of Aug. 12, 1982, shortly after the mall event.

"Father told us he had some wonderful news that might change all our lives, but he wanted it to be a surprise," recalls his daughter Lucy Ngiam, now 38. "He said, 'I'll be home soon' — and that's the last we ever heard of him. We never knew where he went."

Frantic family members searched high and low for the missing farmer, recruiting friends and relatives in the effort and even largest city, where Ngiam was rumored to have an old girlfriend.

But no one thought to check the phone booth, less than half a mile from the family compound.

"By that time, everyone in town knew the old phone didn't work," explains the victim's brother, Stephen Ngiam.

The mummy was discovered on March 5, 2002 after a work order to remove the telephone booth was found behind a phone company Xerox machine.

"When we saw a man standing in the phone booth, we were surprised because we knew it had been out of service for 20 years," one of the workmen told a Malaysian

ANIMALS HURLED SKY-HIGH IN SICK NEW OUTDOOR SPORT

Cruel fat cats use catapults to send critters flying!

BEER-GUZZLING, goose-stepping German fat cats are getting their jollies from a barbaric new "sport" in which helpless animals are sent flying hundreds of feet in the air by medieval catapults!

Scores of innocent animals, including deer, pigs, sheep, rabbits and even cows have been launched airborne in what outraged critics call "a reckless and immature game" 1,000 times crueler than hunting.

"Deer have landed in trees and been stuck there for hours, wild boar have splashed down in backyard kiddie pools — it's absolutely outrageous," blasts furious animal-rights activist Eva Luedemscheid of Berlin.

"Not every animal is like a cat, able to land safely on its feet. This so-called sport is incredibly dangerous to the animals, who are all unwilling participants.

"Even when they're not physically harmed, catapulting an animal long distances is traumatic — most mammals other than bats find being airborne terrifying."

The outrageous new sport, known as "beast-hurling," is exploding in the Black Forest region, where wealthy German businessmen gather on weekends to compete for accuracy, distance and animal-size.

A recent competition held near Zwittenbilch was won by a department store tycoon who catapulted a 1,100-pound bear 700 yards.

Until a month ago, beast-hurling was an underground sport. But now that the cat is out of the bag, aficionados defiantly vow not to bow to pressure groups who want to put a stop to the bizarre activity.

"We're not going to let some tree-hugging pansies spoil our sport the way they ruined fox-hunting over in Great Britain," declares Oskar Sternheim, president of the National Beast-Hurling Club (NBC).

The Black Forest hunks defend the cow-catapulting craziness, which started up about two years ago, as a return to a time-honored tradition.

"This is a tradition that goes back in Europe more than 800 years," explains Sternheim. "It's part of our heritage.

"In medieval times, it was a common practice to catapult diseased pigs and cows over the walls into a besieged city to spread disease — it was the earliest form of germ warfare.

"In time, knights began to catapult animals out of sheer boredom. Eventually, it became a form of knightly entertainment, as much a part of the world of chivalry as jousting. Today, we're trying to recapture that romance."

But there's nothing Camelot-like about the sight of beer-bellied, bratwurst-loving clowns in lederhosen waddling about, ordering flunkies to strap down scared-stiff sheep and other animals in catapults, then barking "Let it rip."

Gambling is rampant at the competitions and enthusiasts typically hoist it up at hunting lodges before the sickening "fun" begins — and bring flasks along as well.

Sternheim insists there's great skill involved in the nutty sport.

"Imagine trying to calculate the trajectory needed to land a 410-pound bear on a 6-foot circle 500 yards away," he points out.

"Fortunately, many of our World War II and they do a wonderful job of advising us."

Every effort is made to prevent harm to the bear-footed projectiles, he claims.

"If your animal is killed or injured, you lose the round," Sternhelm explains.

"Also, the cavaliers are heavily sedated so they don't panic during the flight."

Most beast-hurlers are medieval-history buffs who collect replica catapults.

"Purists don't use catapults designed after 1600, but some younger guys use high-tech, custom-made catapults of the sport is the assault each animal emits in unison.

"Every animal makes a different sound depending on the speed and trajectory," enthuses Sternhelm. "If you hear the howl of a black

"As I stared up in disbelief, trying to make sense of what I was seeing, the cow let out a rowdies sometimes send animals miles astray. In one frightening instance, a bull crashed through the roof of a startled peasant family, splintering the breakfast table as they sat down for their morning coffee.

Indeed, the sickening sport came to light last month when a billy goat landed in the hot tub of the beast-hurlers' own hunting the buttocks. He was rushed to the hospital, but while he's expected to recover fully from the injuries, pals were unable to hush up the story.

Since then, shocking photos of beast-hurling have surfaced in newspapers and animal lovers are up in arms.

Many local politicians are also demanding an end to the beastly practice.

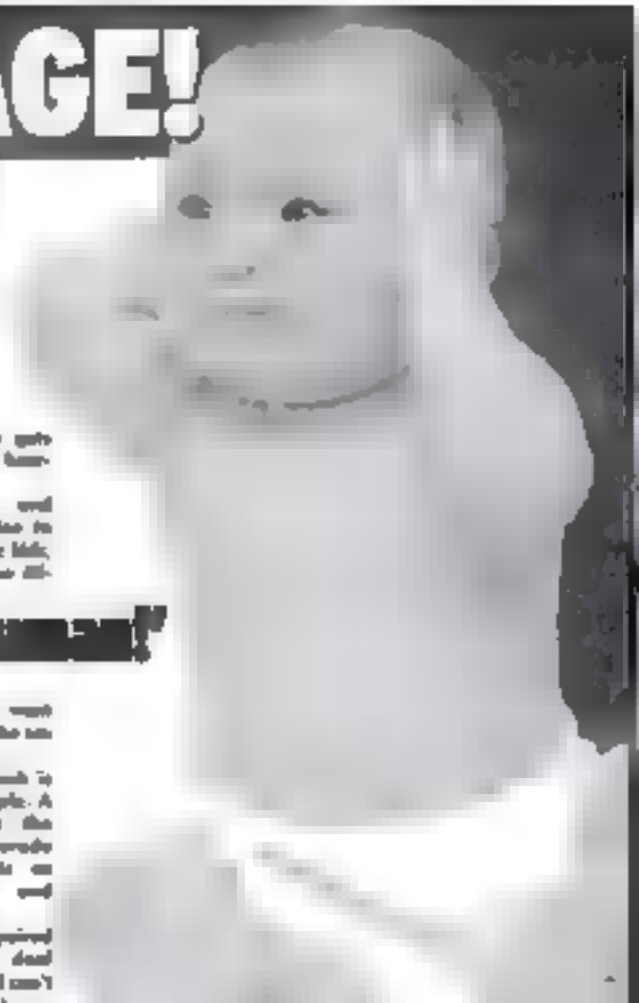
Gay gals have deaf tots on purpose



A PAIR of deaf lesbian lovers have triggered a storm of controversy by purposely getting a man — who also can't hear — to father two deaf children for them.

"This is as bad as the barbarians of old who blinded captives," fumed Baroness Emma Nicholson, a human rights official with the European Parliament.

"This is cruel and inhuman."

Nicholson aired her outrage at gay gals Candy McCullough and Sharon Duchesneau, whose 3-year-old daughter Johanna and new 4-month-old baby Gavin both suffer from severe hearing loss.

Incredibly, the lesbo lovebirds are deaf and purposely planned for the kids to be hearing-challenged, too, by getting a deaf pal to donate his sperm.

Apparently, Sharon and Candy defend their choice to arrange to have defective kids, saying what they did is no different than parents who want to genetically determine the sex of a child.

But an outrage backlash is building against the couple. A campus newspaper at the University of Colorado slammed the gay gals as "hideously selfish" and "incredibly immoral."

And one hearing-impaired person working for a deaf organization exclaimed, "I can't [illegible] by friends as a "member of Philippine arts society," the 48-year-old beauty was a free-lance pianist who made ends meet by working at Edgewater Hospital.

But on the night of Feb. 21, [illegible] took her high-rise northside [illegible] apartment, which smelled of paint and cleaning fluid, and discovered the naked body under a pile of bedroom clothing.

The quiet petite musician had been strangled and stabbed in a vicious attack. The cruel fiend had left a six-inch kitchen knife sticking straight up in her chest before covering her with the clothing and setting it on fire in an effort to erase evidence.

Six months after the savage slaying, homicide investigators were still baffled by the crime.

Then the puzzling case was broken wide open when Mrs. Josephine Chua, a respiratory therapist, who had worked with the victim, notified the hard-working sleuths that she had become "possessed by the spirit of the dead woman."

Chua claimed that Teresita had returned from the grave and named her killer as Allan Showery, 32, who had worked with the women as an orderly at the hospital.

[illegible] by that woman had already been [illegible] at the other end of the earth in her native Dumaguete, on Negros Island in the [illegible], nearly 10,000 miles from Chicago.

And during an astonishing series of three bone-chilling appearances over five days, the dead woman identified her killer, and also provided key information to prove his guilt.

Speaking in a chilling voice through Chua's mouth, the unearthly voice explained that she had let Showery into her 19th floor apartment because she knew him from work and trusted him.

Mrs. Chua's doctor husband, Jose, told homicide investigators that while in trance, his wife spoke in the native Philippine language, Tagalog, with the voice and accent of the dead woman.

"It was creepy," he explained. "chills ran down my spine."

In later court testimony, Dr. Chua said the first time the dead woman made herself known, his wife had begun speaking with a southern Philippine accent, and he asked her name.

"I expected she would say

'STIGMATA PRIEST' CAN TELL FUTURE!

By KATE McCLARE Weekly World News

A YOUNG priest has stunned believers with claims of his amazing superpowers — including the ability to predict what's going to happen!

But Father Z[illegible] Sudac, a 31-year-old cleric born on Krk Island in Croatia, refuses to reveal the dangers he sees coming until he gets permission from Catholic Church officials.

"Until the Church makes an announcement regarding these phenomenon, in my heart I am not sure whether it is good to speak about these things," he said. Sudac also insists he can float in the air, heal the sick and be in two places at the same time. He claims his ability of "bilocation" was confirmed by a half-dozen witnesses.

"I was with some young people [illegible] and meditating," he noted.

Adds another priest, "They knew he was there. He was praying with them. The second place was a church, and some people saw him in front of the church and they shook his hand, so they know he was there."

Sudac said he "would have described this gift to my congregation had some people not come forward and confirmed it all ... six people who saw me physically there ... in front of the church. With one of these, I even shook hands."

Father Sudac calls his [illegible] people "[illegible] stigmata priest" because of marks that appear on his body, which mimic the wounds Christ received when he was nailed to the cross and speared by Roman soldiers.

The holy man received the first bloody marking on his body — a bleeding cross on his forehead — at a prayer meeting in 1999 about a year after he was ordained a priest in his native Croatia.

Doctors and church officials have closely examined the markings, but cannot explain how it got there. "It doesn't [illegible]," Sudac [illegible], "except when I am in prayer and then I feel it pulsating. On [illegible] I felt it pulsating. On the first Fridays I felt it certain times. It is known to bleed and look as though it is crying."

Frank DeRosa, spokesman for the Diocese of Brooklyn and Queens said the Church has taken no position on Father Sudac's powers.

"From what I understand," DeRosa said, "Father Sudac is a priest in good standing. There's no indication he's born anything but a good priest."

Monsignor David Cassato, pastor of St. Athanasius Catholic Church in Brooklyn, N.Y., said Sudac causes a sensation wherever he [illegible].

"Everyone wants to meet him and have him pray over them because of his gifts," said Cassato.

While thousands of believers flock to meet Sudac, he feels uncomfortable about his new celebrity.

"In my heart, I am not sure whether it is good to speak about these things," he said. "I want to draw attention to Jesus Christ, and I am afraid that with these things, I may be drawing attention to myself."

Cardinal Tettamanzi called bingo "a scourge of our times" and "a social disease" that undermines the family.

Bingo is one of the most popular pastimes for local Catholic parishes, which raise big bucks from the game.

LOST JOURNALS OF NIKOLA TESLA DISCOVERED!

KEPT UNDER LOCK AND KEY BY "CUSTODIAN OF ALIEN PROPERTIES" AT [redacted] AIR FORCE BASE FOR OVER 50 YEARS!

NOW THIS ADVANCED TECHNOLOGY IS BEING MADE AVAILABLE FOR YOUR PERSONAL HEALTH AND WELL-BEING!

Nikola Tesla may have been the greatest genius the world has ever known. He created such scientific marvels as the AC motor, radio, fluorescent light, radar, diathermy, the high-frequency furnace, neon sign, remote control, electric transmission, energy transmission at point-focus, principles of the robot, early ionization technology. During his life he was granted over 1,000 patents.

But what is not generally known is that, before his death, Tesla was spearheading a top-secret technology which today is on the verge of providing every person with a way of life that could vastly improve our health as well as personal living conditions. For while Tesla was discredited by his competitors and the scientific community as a charlatan. Now these assignments are on the verge of utilizing his technology in the areas of Inverse Gravity, Alternate Power Sources, Ultra Dimensional Travel, and Teleportation, as well as possibly communicating with other worlds.

Following his death, thousands of pages of his notes concerning these inventions were confiscated and kept under tight security by the "Custodian of Alien Properties" at the vaults of Wright Patterson Air Force Base.

Some of the private projects were said to deal with Tesla's investigations in the Philadelphia Experiment, where a U.S. Navy Escort Destroyer was made to vanish and teleport through time and space.

[redacted]

Recently, thanks to an Executive Action ordering production within of Tesla's "lost projects" have been released to the public for the first time. In these papers—known as the LOST JOURNALS OF NIKOLA TESLA - The Senate reveals how many of Tesla's most powerful and potentially dangerous scientific discoveries might be turned against citizens as programs of behavior and physical modification, that we have compiled months and use of

TESLA'S POSITIVE ENERGY PLATE GENERATORS OFFER MULTIPLE BENEFITS

One [redacted] the great persistent determined truth in Tesla's new young persons developed and tested. Known as Tesla's Positive Plate Generators—or simply Purple Energy Plates—these small, but ultra powerful plates, harness the same basic elements of the universe

Tesla believed that everything in the universe is made of energy and vibration, and that each basic element of the known atomic chart consists of energy and different rates of vibration.

Tesla's Purple Energy Plates are for the purpose of helping humankind raise their vibrational rates. The atomic structure of the plates have been altered, and the atoms and electrons are in resonance - or in sync - with the basic energy of the Universe. They function as "transformers," creating a field of energy around themselves that will penetrate any material substance.

This energy is reportedly very beneficial to the life force of all living things. It is claimed that the Purple Energy Plates have been useful in mental and physical healing, as reported by many who have tested the alleged healing power of the various small Purple Energy Plates. One of they will help relieve anxiety, depression, and fatigue while increasing your vitality. The gentle forces of these subtle energizers will flood the body with renewed [redacted]

Now you may find out for yourself the benefits of the Purple Energy Plates and read the LOST JOURNALS OF NIKOLA TESLA.

For a limited time, readers of this publication may take advantage of our SPECIAL COMBINATION OFFER consisting of a copy of Tesla's Lost Journals as well as obtaining an energy plate (currently available in two sizes a size to carry in your pocket, or a larger plate for apartments in your home).

The Tesla Purple Energy Plates are said to be able to neutralize anything negative and are in no way harmful. Test them for yourself and see if you are convinced of the power radiating from them. Tesla Plates are working on that with those concerned about exposure to computer monitors and cell phone radiation. Some claim they help overcome cramps, headaches, softness, restlessness and depression. To order both, simply call our toll, automated credit card hotline at 732-602-3403 or use the handy coupon order form below.

BENEFITS AND USES FOR TESLA PURPLE ENERGY PLATES

HOW TO BE A GOLD DIGGER

IF YOU'RE a dough or die kind of woman, the kind of gal with a million dollar smile who only smiles at millionaires and whose idea of a perfect man is one who is tall, dark and "has some," read on.

Weekly World News has prospected ten 24 carat tips for mining a million dollars from successful women who have made lavish livings as human gimme pigs.

1. Look for fiscal fitness. Well heeled men aren't knocking back hollermaker's at the Buffalo Breath Brewery and Bowl-a-Rama — they're doing the same damage to their livers albeit more slowly and more expensively — in bars and chic eateries with separate male/female toilet facilities, chrome and [redacted] linen tablecloths. They're also at chi-chi fundraisers to save endangered lesbian whales and to raise money for albino hunchback sufferers. Check the society [redacted] your local paper for tips and dress appropriately. Which brings us to

7. Do your homework. If he's interested in breeding Siamese fighting fish, or fascinated with 14th century [redacted] political intrigue, you are too — or at least you know enough to spark a feeling that you have something in common beyond the bedroom.

8. Keep him isolated. Kidnappers know this trick. Find excuses to avoid his family and friends until it's too late for them — they're only interested in protecting their own selfish interests. Ditto for your friends, especially if they love reminiscing about the time you "entertained" the entire defensive line of the Oakland Raiders. Remember: a mist will marry a mystery, but not an open book.

9. Keep him guessing. Hold the pure passion in check until at least the third date — and then do it on your terms and your turf. You don't want to come off as a human trampoline too soon.

10. Say "goodbye" to get him to propose. All men want what they can't [redacted]. Once you've snagged him, don't sign any premarital agreements. After all, if he REALLY loves you ...

ZOWIE! RUSSIA'S PAUL BUNYAN IS 9½ FEET TALL!

A SHIVERING Russian lumberjack would stand head and shoulders over America's Paul Bunyan — because he's an incredible 9½ feet tall!

Pavel Kovalyk, 35, is the tallest human being who ever lived, according to Russian newspapers, which claim the six-foot mountain man can chop down a mind-bending 12 trees a month.

Most historians agree that, exaggerations aside, the real Paul Bunyan was about 8 feet tall.

Pavel, who plans his trade on the Verkoyansk mountain range, doesn't come from a family of giants. His dad is 5-foot-11, and his mom is just over 5 feet 2.

"People always ask me, 'How's the weather up there?' and I usually tell them, 'It's a bit breezy,'" good-natured Pavel told a reporter.

EAGLE SNATCHES PUPPY INTO SKY

. . . and then drops it 300 feet!

THE whole poop and nothing but the poop

A CUDDLY dachshund miraculously survived after being snatched into the air by a powerful bald eagle and dropped 300 feet to the ground!

But it was touch-and-go for several days for Ava, the tough little 7-year-old weenie dog. She clung to life in the hospital while fighting internal injuries from the eagle's talons.

When the eagle swooped down on her Ava was innocently frolicking in the yard of her owner John Martins, a farmer in rural Maine. The bird of prey grabbed the 13-pound pooch and soared off with the pet. Martins was powerless to help Ava, for the bald eagle is protected by federal law — no one can touch a feather on its endangered head!

Now the 68-year-old farmer is stuck with Ava's hospital bill, which could be as much as $1,000 or more. But he said does not mind doing whatever it took, no matter the cost.

"I wanted to save the life of my Ava," he said.

As for the eagle, Martins harbors no hard feelings since it's America's national symbol.

"I like this bird," said Martins, a Portuguese immigrant. "This bird is very important for this country. I wouldn't feel good if somebody killed this bird."

THE young dachshund glutted because a weiner sandwich for the hungry bird.

Faithful Blue stayed by his mistress' side while she called for help. Suddenly, Blue started growling and charged off into the night — straight for an alligator that had crawled up out of the canal. Ignoring the danger to his own life and fought off the gator, saving his human friend while suffering several injuries.

AMERICA'S MOST OUTSPOKEN

My on-line lover thinks I'm as hot as Mariah Carey!

Dear Dotti: I [redacted] about six months ago and we've had a great on-line relationship that could be leading to a real face-to-face romance.

We've exchanged pictures and he looks a lot like Russell Crowe — which is everything I want in a man.

The trouble is the picture that I sent him was a phony. I'm not exactly drop-dead gorgeous, and I didn't want him to dump me as soon as he found out what I look like, so I sent him a picture of my best friend. She's a model and looks a lot like Mariah Carey. She's been pressuring me to meet him in person and now I don't know what to do. — Sorry I Lied in Crestview

Dear Sorry: Send your friend, instead, you pathetic dying mamp. I'll bet she'll get a hysterical

"Russell Crowe" probably looks more like John Belushi — after 20 years sitting underground

Uncle moon-in-law is corrupting my kids

Dear Dotti: What should I do about my mother-in-law? She is gregarious and outspoken. Possibly she cheats on her. Which brings me to another question — should a grandmother wear leopard skin Capri pants and listen to rap music? I'm afraid she's setting a bad example for her grandchildren! — Frustrated in Angel Falls

Dear Frustrated: You're the bad example by meddling in your mother-in-law's affairs. She'll be telling you how to dress or what music to listen to. The grandkids probably get a kick out of a grandmother who speaks up, and likely to her it's a little like a sex change from a mousy mom who lends a drab dreary frustrated environment up really by instructing someone who knows how to live!

Help! I have to cook for my boyfriend's parents

Dear Dotti: I don't know much about cooking, but I've got to make a special meal for my boyfriend and his parents very soon. A friend of mine suggested something called "Chicken a la King" which I haven't heard of but it sounds like it's fit for a king — which is how I think of my guy. Do you have any suggestions? — Loves to Please in Omaha

Dear Loves to Please: Do I look like a food writer? But, on second thought, I'm feeling generous so I'll share my special French chicken dish with you. It's called "Eight Legged Chicken a la Mode." Get a chicken, turn the oven up to 300 degrees and let it cook while you empty something burning and eat inside coming out of the burners. Take it out and shove six ice cream sticks in it. Don't forget to take off the paper wrappers! "A la Mode" is French for "with ice cream" and was you'll have your main meal and dessert all in one, plus eight drumsticks instead of only two. Bon appetite, sucker!

I want to be a rock 'n' roll god!

Dear Dotti: I'm 15-years-old and I want to be a rock 'n' roll god. I think my feelings and the way I express myself — like wearing black and piercing 17 holes in my face and dyeing my hair purple — are very unique, like my lyrics. Here's a sample: "I know that when someone kicks, they're not really gone at all. They've just taken Satan's hand and have begun to dance in Charlie Manson's mall. Then worms and trolls eat their brains in the Dark Lord's arms the finest dish is PAIN!" What do you think? Rock on! — Future Rock Star in Pedregal

Dear Future Rock Star: I think it's fun, like for you. The worms and trolls and all that stuff you've probably been singing have already eaten what passes for your brain.

Does 'I need more space' mean that I just got dumped?

Dear Dotti: My girlfriend left me two weeks ago and told me that she "needs more space" and that our relationship would be better if we were "just friends." What does that mean? — Clueless in Ketchum

Dear Clueless: Clean out your ears! What part of "You've been dumped" do you not understand? Translated: Anytime a woman says "we need to talk," followed by the "more space" and "just friends" spiel it's the kiss of death for the guy.

CONFIDENTIALS

Missing Cousin in Petersburg: No, I'm not related to the West Virginia Primrose clan. Our family has all our teeth and can count past our fingers and toes!

Needs More Advice in Anderson: Do I have to spell it out? You're beyond H-E-L-P!

Sandy the Southern Belle: Pack up the hoop skirt, sister. The war's been over for 137 years and your Confederate currency is worthless.

Fortune Teller in Tallahassee: Thanks for the warning, but if you're so good why didn't you know I had my appendix removed 18 years ago? Use your crystal ball for something useful — like bowling!

Sassy Lassie in Laredo: Cut back on the bean burritos or give your friends gas masks. But it sounds like you'd be better off having the EPA designate you as a toxic waste super fund site.

LIVE LITTLE MEI
IN SARDI

By JUSTIN MITCHELL

A DANISH fish factory worker was stunned when he opened a can of sardines and found a tiny, living 4-inch mermaid packed among her scaly cousins.

"I couldn't believe my eyes," says Jens Grootenboer, who works at the cannery in Arnsted, Denmark where the mysterious mermaid was apparently packed. "It was as if Hans Christian Andersen's fairy tale had come to life.

"I was just about to make a couple sandwiches for myself, rolled open the top and there she was ... blond hair, big breasts, arms and a fish tail."

"It was if she was sleeping with the fishes."

Grootenboer said he carefully plucked the miniature mermaid from the water in which she was packed and then almost dropped her when she began moving.

"She felt like a real fish," the father of five said. I yelled and almost threw her on the floor but then realized I had a living fairy-tale creature in the palm of my hand."

Thinking fast, Grootenboer pushed her in a small bowl with his pet goldfish Hugo.

"She began swimming around slowly," says Grootenboer, and even appeared to be trying to communicate with Hugo. I dropped some food in and she ate it up, then nibbled on me, grinned and spun off.

"So I went and got a piece of salmon and dropped that in. She gobbled it down and smiled. Then, she yawned, curled up and went to sleep."

He took photos of his find as he nursed her — which he plans to sell to Sun — obtained on an exclusive basis.

We first reported the existence of mini-mermaids on October 3. Our Asian correspondent Jean Young uncovered the gruesome practice of South Korean, Chinese and Vietnamese harvesting and selling the tiny treasures as talisman delicacies.

Grootenboer said his cannery packs thousands of cans daily for distribution and sale throughout the world and his "lucky tin" was one in a case that the Arnsted Royal Fisheries gives to employees as a monthly bonus.

"I can only imagine that she was picked up in one of the trawling nets and packed with the sardines ... she wouldn't have survived. It's a good thing that she

DOPE OF THE WEEK

There's something heroic about this girl

A FILTHY FLASHER was no match for a quick-thinking 12-year-old girl, when he cornered her in an elevator and tried to give her a dirty show.

Copying the hilarious scene from the comedy film There's Something About Mary where actor Ben Stiller gets a painful kind, the evil headed kid just grabbed the flasher's open zipper and yanked it up — hard!

As the pained pervert howled in agony, the youngster bolted from the elevator. She was followed by the sleazy sidekick whose privates where bleeding, having been cut by the zipper.

The girl's stepfather caught up with him, but following a struggle, the kinky criminal got away.

Cops in Virginia Beach, Va., expect to nail the crippled creep seeking medical help at a local hospital. He faces a charge of taking indecent liberties with a minor.

Meanwhile, the plucky girl was not hurt.

Airport guards make boy chug filthy water

SECURITY GUARDS didn't believe a 14-year-old boy when he said the liquid he was bringing aboard a plane was a science experiment. So they forced him to drink it — and he got sick.

The boy ran afoul of guards at the Aspen, Colo., airport when he told them he was carrying water he'd collected from a creek for his biology class.

After sipping the slop, he became nauseous, he said. Now, he fears that the liquid may have been loaded with parasites and other bugs that cause a life-threatening intestinal illness.

Meanwhile, a red-faced official from the Federal Aviation Administration announced to the boy and his family

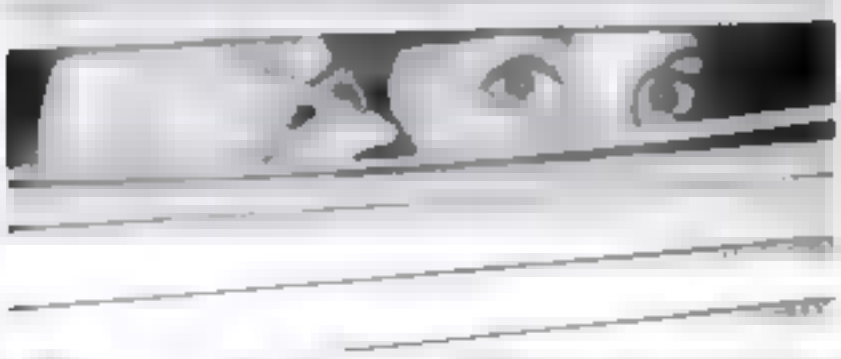
AMERICA'S SEXIEST PSYCHIC

Let Serena help with these issues, daily and weekly horoscopes, love and money matters, your future, the stars' influence on you, how to win, how to lose, your destiny, your fortune, the stars' advice to you.

My girlfriend is a sicko stalker—



Dear Serena: I recently met a woman at the library and we hit it off great. She's gorgeous, intelligent and eager to please. But I think she's a stalker.

After a few dates, I had to cancel one of the last minute and left her a phone message that she said she never got. The next day she left multiple messages on my home phone and work phone scaring my co-workers to death. When we finally spoke to each other I let her know she had overreacted. She apologized, but I've noticed lately that I'm getting hang up calls and sometimes see her car near my house or when I'm out shopping. — Freaked Out in Seattle

Dear Freaked Out: A look into my crystal ball and the vibrations I pick up from your letter tell me that you're a openly attached to you and fears being abandoned. I've cast a relaxing spell directed at her that will help calm her jitters. She is harmless but needs a little more reassuring than most people. After my spell takes effect you'll see a big change – probably by the time you read this letter. Blessings to you both!

Dear Serena: My unmarried son is 44 years old and runs a struggling business buying and selling comic books and Star Wars collectibles over the Internet. He still lives at home. I'm the old-fashioned, but I just don't think it's proper for a man his age to live with his parents, and I think it would be best for him to move out. Should I insist him, or learn to be more supportive? I've sent you a photocopy of my palm for better insight. — Fed-up in Framingham

Dear Fed-up: Your heard line reveals your conflict, but your head line – the source of logic – tells me that you know the right thing to do. It is high time for your son to move his modem elsewhere. You must approach this carefully. However, Remind him that you'll continue to love and help support him and that your home. My crystal ball also reveals that he will soon make a financial killing on a rare Obi Wan "Jedi Quest" collectible that will significantly boost his fortune and enable him to move comfortably.

While World News has purchased exclusive rights to the world's most powerful computer — and we use it to pick the six luckiest lottery numbers every week!

The Swiss-built computer, called Delphi Seven, has the ability to calculate which lottery numbers are most likely to come up each week, based on previous performance and established tendencies. The numbers are good for the week Weekly World News is on the newsstand.

The computer scans all numbers selected in lotteries across America over the past year to provide a statistical base for predicting future results. Most value is given to the most recently selected numbers.

Using all available data, the computer picks the luckiest numbers

TALKING WASHING

INVENTORS like mine come up with the world's first talking washing machine — for people who are so spoiled they can't take care of themselves!

The Electrolux Wanny Tilly was made for customers in India, where more and more people are too rich to do their laundry for themselves anymore. Many middle-class Indians are also firing their servants because they can't afford them.

"In the past," said Electrolux vice president Tom Wells, "family or servants would have done these

OOPS! 'MURDERED CORPSE' TURNS OUT TO BE SEX DOLL

In a bizarre twist on the classic Hitchcock flick Rear Window, a man was fingered for murder by a snoopy neighbor who spied him carrying what looked like dead body into his apartment.

The embarrassed guy was later cleared by cops when it turned out the "corpse" was really his beloved sex doll.

Authorities in Munich, Germany, refuse to identify either the red-faced suspect or the eagle-eyed neighbor saying that to do so would cause "needless embarrassment."

But fellow residents in the apartment complex say the would-be hero neighbor is sorely disappointed.

"He [knows himself] wants sort of amateur detective and is always looking through his binoculars to see if anything illegal is going on in the neighborhood," revealed a lady neighbor who requested anonymity. "He thought this time he'd really solved a serious crime, like Jimmy Stewart in that old American movie, but instead he ended up looking like a fool."

The weird crime drama began when the busybody spotted the "suspect" stealthily returning home toting what appeared to be a semi-nude female body.

"From what I hear, it really did look like a young woman," another neighbor said. "First he thought she'd been kidnapped, but from how still the body was he became convinced she was dead."

The Good Samaritan got on the horn to the police, who rushed to the scene ready to make an arrest. When patrolling cops arrived at the scene, the sweaty, nervous suspect behaved as if he really had committed a diabolical murder.

As the man was grilled by cops, he seemed "surprised and disturbed" by their questions, a police spokeswoman later told reporters.

Finally the accused killer produced his startling alibi.

"When the officers told the man they were investigating a murder, he showed them his newly acquired all-vinyl sex doll," the spokeswoman said.

"The man also showed the officers four other inflatable sex dolls he owns. And he had good reason to act as if he'd been caught doing something wrong.

"Apparently he had just been testing out his newest plaything when police banged on his door."

After the suspect presented the eye-popping evidence, the cops took a hasty retreat and dropped the murder-investigation file "case closed."

"I just didn't want to die [and] turn into pig lunger," the police spokeswoman said.

But that hasn't been the end of the story for the hapless sex doll collector. "Now, everyone in the apartment complex thinks he's some kind of perverted loser who can't get a real woman," the lady neighbor said.

"Kids riding their bikes laugh at him and the men poke fun at him, asking, 'How are your girlfriends today?' It's really been a nightmare for the poor fellow."

FRANTIC [redacted] officials are desperately trying to cover up a terrifying report by weather experts which predicts that this summer will be the hottest, driest, stormiest ever, leaving thousands dead in its wake.

The official forecast is in the file that warnings posted on the National Oceanic & Atmospheric Administration's (NOAA)

Internet site were yanked and "watered down" for fear of sparking a national panic.

And the government is doing everything it can to bush up the report and keep the hysteria triggering forecast under wraps.

No less a figure than President George W Bush is said to have "angrily issued" the order to remove and retain the forecast that warned of "unstoppable wildfires, crop withering drought, deadly dust and electrical storms, devastating flash floods and a wave of as many as 740 killer hurricanes" that are expected to take, burn and raze the United States in June, July and August.

The supposed forecast further advised citizens in every state to prepare themselves for "a sustained weather event — a scorching, blistering heat wave — unlike anything seen since the summer of 1998."

In that year, trees, homes and at least three children were reported to have "burst into flames spontaneously" under an

Tornado Safety Rules:

In a home or building, move to a predesignated shelter, such as a basement.

If an underground shelter is not available, move to a small interior room or hallway on the lowest floor and get under a sturdy piece of furniture. Put as many walls as possible between you and the outside.

Stay away from windows.

Get out of automobiles.

Do not try to outrun a tornado in your car. Instead, leave it immediately for safe shelter. If caught outside or in a vehicle, lie flat in a nearby ditch or depression and cover your head with your hands.

Highway overpasses do not provide shelter from tornadic winds.

universally sun that literally blew the mercury out of old-fashioned thermometers that weren't built to register temperatures over 134 degrees Fahrenheit.

"This is what I call 'Mother Nature on her attack mode' — and make no mistake, every man, woman and child in America will feel her fury this summer," declared meteorologist Dr. Phillip Prewette, a former NOAA forecaster who obtained and leaked copies of the banned forecast to a handful of trusted reporters here in the nation's capital.

"You can blame El Nino, the cyclical warming of the Pacific Ocean that impacts air masses and weather patterns, for part of the intense heat, drought and stormy weather that's in the forecast.

"But there's more to it than that. Global warming in general and greenhouse gases in particular are prime offenders. Coupled with El Nino, and coming off one of the warmest and driest winters in memory, we've got to expect the worst.

"I don't want to be an alarmist, but unlike NOAA and the White House, I have no intention of sugarcoating the truth. We're talking water shortages and water rationing, power shortages and blackouts, wildfires, crop damage, food shortages and a worse explosion as early as the first two weeks of June.

"As summer wears on, I wouldn't be surprised to see the air catch fire in parched, smog-riddled cities like Los Angeles."

And the wrenching heat will trigger an air-conditioning crisis. The tremendous temperature shifts will cause an overload on A/C circuitry, in many areas breaking down. There will be a shortage of refrigerants, replacement parts and new units, leaving millions of people to live in oven-like conditions.

Both NOAA and the National Weather Service, which NOAA oversees, declined to comment officially on the suppressed weather warning and forecast, although sources privately confirmed that Dr. Prewette "is a reliable source" and "knows what he's talking about."

White House motives were equally tight-lipped about President Bush's role in what some Capitol Hill reporters already are calling the "Weather-gate" cover-up.

Oddly enough, the President referred questions out to NOAA Administrator General Lautenbacher, Jr., but to Director of Homeland Security Tom Ridge — who said he was "unfamiliar" with the forecast but promised he would "look into it."

When hours, an aide issued a brief statement from Judge citing "national security concerns" as his reason to address the issue further.

Dr. Prewette said he decision to release the original NOAA forecast — which was posted on NOAA's Internet site "www.noaa.gov" for just under three hours before it was yanked on April 5 — didn't come easy.

"I appreciate Tom's concerns and the concerns of President Bush," he explained. "But the forecast was good for with no debate and it's a matter of public record — at least, it was a matter of public record until it was pulled off the Internet.

"Americans have a right to know the truth."

Here, according to Dr. Prewette is the region-by-region summer forecast the federal government doesn't want you to see:

SOUTH

A summer-like heat wave is expected to roast the South with temperatures reaching 115 degrees as early as June and rising in the 140 range when peaking in late August, the forecast worried.

Drought like conditions that have parched the region since 1998 will not only continue unabated but worsen — with blistering heat baking weeds in the ground causing billions in crop damage and thinning thousands out of work. Unrelenting the deep South with a recession.

WORST SUMMER WEATHER EVER!

SUNBATHING will be out of the question

The heat will be so intense, people will not be able to venture outside!

FORECASTER On Profile Prospects

Severe Weather Safety Rules:

Develop a plan for you and your family for home, work, school and outdoors.

Have a NOAA Weather Radio with a warning alarm tone and battery backup to receive warnings.

Identify a safe place to take shelter.

Have frequent drills.

Keep a highway map nearby to follow storm movement from weather bulletins.

On the Internet, go to http://www.nws.noaa.gov for NWS watches and warnings.

Listen to radio and television for weather information.

Check the weather forecast before leaving for extended periods outdoors. Watch for signs of approaching storms.

If severe weather threatens, check on people who are elderly, very young, or physically or mentally disabled, who can't find suitable shelter.

ll while are likely to become a daily occurrence by July.

Look for these storms to spawn nearly twisters and ignite wildfires capable of destroying millions of acres of forest, contributing to the pollution index and even threatening to burn entire neighborhoods, towns and cities to the ground.

"Although beneficial rains will be scarce, the likelihood of sudden and deadly flash floods will threaten the region through the summer," said the forecast. "It's too early for specifics, but as always, everyone living in the Tennessee Valley area is at risk."

The hurricane season that begins in June is expected to produce fewer tropical storms than normal. But the forecast tempered the good news with bad, warning of at least one and possibly two slow moving, major hurricanes "capable of blowing coastal cities like Charleston, S.C., Wilmington, N.C. and Miami off the map" with sustained winds in excess of 175 m.p.h.

The forecast went on to say that the region may escape widespread water shortages and rationing if authorities enact water restrictions such as bans on watering lawns and golf courses, filling swimming pools and washing cars before the onset of summer.

SOUTH

Northern states are expected to roast under blistering heat and humidity with actual temperatures approaching 120 and "heat-humidity index" figures — how hot the air actually feels — topping a mind-boggling 135 in big "stagnant air" cities like Boston and New York.

Dangerously stale air will only add to pollution problems throughout the region, imperiling children, senior citizens and anyone with a respiratory problem or compromised immune system.

With rain in extremely short supply and temperatures soaring to unprecedented highs, demand for air-conditioning is expected to exceed supply as early as the second week in

SELFISH GOURMETS KILL MONKEYS FOR MEAT!

ADORABLE monkeys and chimps are disappearing from their African homes, so that spoiled gourmets can feast on the latest delicacy — endangered animals!

Monkey meat has become a huge trade in Africa — and scientists warn that many of our primate pals will be extinct in only 50 short years. One monkey species, the Miss Waldron Red Colobus, already has been wiped out by hunters feeding the voracious appetites of misguided gourmets.

Many other animals also wind up on dinner plates, including antelope, rats, rat eaters, rodents and hippos. Known as "bushmeat," the flesh of these poor creatures is being devoured as gourmet goodies by people who believe they can become as strong, smart or swift as the murdered animal.

But it's the trade in chimpanzees, gorillas and chimpanzees that's the most outrageous, because it's such a big business.

"Millions of pounds of bushmeat are coming into the United Kingdom every year," said Barry Gardiner, a member of England's Parliament, who is so outraged that he has launched an anti-bushmeat campaign.

"It's organized ... it's big money," said an official at London's Gatwick Airport, which is a major gateway for bushmeat smugglers. "People get paid $50 or $60 at check-in desks in Ghana or Nigeria to take a suitcase with meat in it with a street value of $1,500."

Another airport official said smugglers arrive with as much as 66 pounds of bushmeat. They bring in bags packed to the brim with meat, and claim it as gifts for friends," he said.

The problem is that airport workers have no power to investigate their cargo, police say. They can confiscate the meat, but they can't charge anyone with a crime unless they know the meat is being sold — and they have to be told of specific cases.

Those who slip past customs inspectors simply put the carcass of meat in a waiting van — which moves the meat to secret stalls at local markets.

"There is monkey meat for sale here if people know you," said a vendor at one London market, where a whole smoked monkey leers ahead. Eek!

The bushmeat poaching hurts people too. Some African tribes eat bushmeat because it's their only source of protein. They kill a relatively small number of animals and rely them only for their own survival. The mass poaching by greedy hunters is taking away their only source of food.

IRAN TAKES AIM AT 'EVIL' BARBIE

IN an effort to counter the evil influence of America's Barbie doll, Iran has introduced its version of Barbie and Ken — twin dolls Dara and Sara, who promote traditional values with their modest clothing and pro-family stories.

The Dara and Sara dolls, one a boy and the other a girl, are an effort to counter the American dolls and accessories that have flooded the Iranian market. A government spokesman said young girls who play with Barbie, a doll he sees as "wanton," could grow into women who reject Iranian values.

"I think every Barbie doll is more harmful than an American missile," he said.

Man 'dying to be a woman' — dead after sex change

A JAPANESE man who reportedly had told friends he was "dying to be a woman" literally did so when he met his maker on an Osaka operating table following a sex-change operation.

The 25-year-old became a she only for a day after going to the Wada Keisei cosmetic surgery clinic.

The unfortunate "she-male's" condition worsened after leaving the operating room and the patient was rushed to a general hospital where the newly minted woman "drowned" the next day due to too much fluid in the lungs.

The case is being investigated for possible medical malpractice. A woman underwent surgery on her jaw at the same clinic in January, but later died in a hospital after she, too, suffocated in her own fluids.

Sex-change operations are relatively rare and new to Japan. The Every woman who dreams of a long, full head of hair reaching down to her waist can get a bottle of Capilong PSB/33 worth $19.95 FOR FREE, but you must place your order within the next 21 days.

Developed in France by a French scientist following the discovery of a new growth molecule, this capillary treatment immediately encourages rapid growth. And produces an amazingly full head of hair. Proven results.

- Even if your hair barely grows at all right now...
- Even if your hair is fine and brittle...
- Even if you have already tried all sorts of lotions...

"30 inches in four months! None of my friends can believe it. I never thought it would be possible."

Perhaps you have wondered why your hair is so fine and brittle? Why it doesn't naturally grow on its own to lengths of 20, 25, even 30 inches – like you've seen on other women?

The answer is simply because your body lacks the nutritive substances for your hair roots to grow normally.

■ Scientifically proven

If your hair roots wither, you lose split ends and growth is spare. That's why you don't get the long flowing hair you want. Capilong PSB/33 now lets you remedy this deficiency.

1 Capilong PSB/33 frees clogged roots and nourishes each root with a powerful growth molecule.

2 The molecule feeds each root the same way fertilizer feeds a plant, and helps your hair grow faster.

■ Fast Results

You'll see your hair is thicker and fuller the very first week. In 2 or 3 weeks, you'll be able to measure your hair and see how much longer it's grown. Your friends, family, fellow workers and everyone you meet will be impressed by the growth.

When he saw my hair grow 1½ inches in a month ( ) my hairdresser couldn't believe his eyes

Moreover, Capilong PSB/33 contains the 100% natural protein compound called Sandpro – to immediately make your hair softer, healthier, silkier and much fuller.

■ How to use Capilong

With the applicator provided, place 15 drops of Capilong PSB/33 on your scalp every night before sleeping. Then softly massage it in. Hair specialists recommend you rub your hair much more gently than you would rub skin, but place your fingers on your scalp and move your scalp back and forth in small brisk motions, to stimulate blood flow. Accompanying instructions explain the simple proven way to do.
